

ABSTRACT

5 A tool is used to hold an array of wafer scale protective caps and place the array onto a semiconductor wafer. The tool comprises a first tool half made from a semiconductor which has a coefficient of thermal expansion which is about the same as that of the wafer. The first tool half has surface features for molding and retaining the array. The caps have central areas surrounded by sidewalls.